

THE WILD SIDE OF ELBRUZ

With its 5641m high, Elbruz is the true 'Roof of Europe'.

It is a legendary volcano of which the Normal Route, located on the South side, is very frequented but does not present a major interest. However, the North side isn't more difficult technically but is surely the most preserved and wild. It is for us the ideal side to immerse in the traditional Russian mountain spirit and to share the adventure with the Caucasian nomads.

After a flying into Mineralnye Vody via Moscow, we take the road in direction of Piatigorsk. The next day, we are driven to Hathansu : the base camp. From there, we start acclimatizing in a very bucolic surrounding (a paradise for flower amateurs). A good rest day allows us to enjoy the Hathansu site, meeting point of Russian highlanders. We then climb to 'Uncle Nik' refuge, which is our advanced base camp. Up there, we finalize our acclimation to be able to leave in a clear night towards the summit.. Once we reach the pass, there's only a small ridge before we reach the top. We have made it, and the view is breath taking and unforgettable !

Once back at the refuge, after a good relaxing time, we join the Hathansu camp and then, on beautiful and aerial slopes through lush pastures, we finally get back to the city of Piatigorsk.
